

The three apples

In French the three above are called « apples » : the first one is a « ground apple » (pomme de terre), the second one a « tree apple » (pomme de l'air) and the third one a « shower apple » (pomme de douche)

The sequel happens in a garden : there is a house (with a dad, a mom + childrens), some trees, some earth (with vegetables) ... and a dump

In that garden are three apples : a young ground apple (busy growing in the soil), a young tree apple (busy growing in a tree) and an old shower apple (forgotten in the dump)

As soon as the ground apple is big enough to understand it is growing, it asks the older potatoes what is going to happen to it : they answer that some ended mashed, when other were french fried

As soon as the tree apple is big enough to understand it is growing, it asks the older tree apples what is going to happen to it : they answer that some ended as applesauce, when other finished as juice

The sad shower apple was listening to these chats .. and there was not even another shower apple to speak with

When big enough the ground apple decided what its yearnings were : to be on top of a bag of crisps

When big enough the tree apple decided what its yearnings were : to be part of a good apple tart

Saddy shower apple wants to shout « I want to be eaten too » ... but it can't even speak

Mom and Dad are at picking time and come (with the children) to pick the ground apples and pluck the tree apples ... and the shower apple is lonelier than ever

But the children were playing round their picking parents, and one of them saw the shower apple and asks « Mom can I pick the shower apple and feed it to the dumpster ? »

Hearing that the shower apple heaves a sigh « they kept me for the sweets »

Beware ! Its the only story with every character happy to be eaten